MIDLAND

Ed Royce, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Burnett and daughter, Anna and Lillian Knapp, attended the meeting at the Miller Hill school house Monday night. They report having had a pleasant and profitable time and gave the verdict that Miller Hill women were good cooks for they served such dainty refreshments.

Prof. Wilcox spoke of the advantage of the county school unit plan which he said had worked out successfully in Crook county and in other counties. He explained the advantage it would be to the rural school which would be put on a city school basis with competent and experienced men to administer the work. He also spoke of the economy and uniformity of the system.

All school supplies, Prof. Wilcox pointed out, would be purchased in large quantities, which would make a great saving to taxpayers of the county. Then, too, he said, each child would have the same opportunity for education in all schools in the county.

"In short it would mean much better schools for the rural children, which is one of the greatest problems in the United States today," Prof. Wilcox concluded.

Wm. Ezell spoke ably on the advantages of club work, for rural boys and girls. He said that to educate the rural boy and girl in scientific farming would keep them on the farms, as it would help develop them into real business men and women. He also said that many rural boys and girls went to the cities because nothing of interest was given them to do on the farm. He said club work had made his son take a great deal of interest in dairying, as he is a member of Miller Hill dairy record club, and that he hoped all parents would get behind club work.

J. W. Allen spoke of the splendid record Klamath county made at the state fair and Corvallis last summer. He said Klamath county had more members present at Corvallis than any other county in the state.

He also spoke of the splendid work of the Miller Hill dairy record club at Corvallis, at the state fair and at the Klamath Falls chamber of commerce. Allen visited this county for three days on this trip in interest of club work.

After the meeting the Miller Hill women served dainty refreshments. Miss Ila Hooper was the guest of Theima Konig Monday evening.

Geo. Furber was a business visitor to Klamath Falls Tuesday.

J. C. Beckley, prominent stockman of Klamath Falls, was a Midland visitor Sunday.
